

Radical Groups are Riding Demonstrations

written by Harakatuna

Demonstrations call for the repeal of the KPK Law and several other demands to re-emerge. The action that was held in various places by a number of students became a strategic and soft momentum for radical groups. In fact, the movements of radical groups riding this demonstration have begun to be detected.

It would be very unfortunate if radical groups use student demonstrations and students, who have a noble mission, for other agendas, bring down legitimate governments, for example. It should be noted together that one of the main features of the radicalist movement is to overthrow the constitutionally legitimate government. This can be seen from the events that occurred in a number of countries in the Middle East.

Why is that? Because Indonesia adheres to a democratic system, which they later call the Thaghut state and the system is infidels. They are only willing to submit and obey the daulah / khilafah islamiyah. So, the motion of no confidence in the government has been embedded from the beginning, even in the womb, without having to wait for the enactment of a law that weakens the KPK.

If at present there are demands that lead to distrust of the government, radical groups are grinning and will always participate (piggybacking) on movements or momentum that lead to the creation of waves of hatred and distrust of the legitimate government.

So, if there is a big wave of demonstrations, then half the work and mission of the radicals is done by itself. So, their next agenda is to just participate or ride and provoke other communities to take part in demonstrations that lead to the fall of the head of state (coup).

National Police Chief Gen. Tito Karnavian gave an indication and the potential of radical groups in the demonstrations that took place yesterday. The National Police Chief even said that the riot at the student demonstration in front of the RI DPRI building yesterday was similar to the May 22 action. The demonstration that was accompanied by the burning of police posts, tires, and TNI vehicles as well as throwing stones and using Molotov is similar to the pattern of demonstrations on May 21-23; started in the afternoon, until the evening and this, still said the National Police Chief, was carried out quite systematically, there were those who arranged it.

Although the National Police Chief was reluctant to mention the name or the party who designed the riots in the demonstration yesterday, but one thing to watch out for is that radical groups have great potential to ride demonstrations which are said to be held again in the near future.

Monotheism Parade and Political Motives of Radical Groups

As if the radical group wants to maintain the emotional rhythm of the people towards the government which is overtaken in demonstrations until 20 October, where on this date there will be painful momentum for the radical groups, namely the inauguration of the President and Vice President of Indonesia for the coming 2019-2024 period.

In order to safeguard these collective emotions, radical groups apparently have prepared a movement that is wrapped up in the 2019 Indonesia Monotheism Parade: Monotheism to Save the Country “. The action as well as the monarch flag parade that has been circulating widely in the community will reportedly be held on Saturday (28/9) at 06.00-11.00 am. with the Senayan-Monas route.

Reporting from CNNIndonesia.com, according to the statement of PA 212 chairman Slamet Maarif, there are several aspirations to be conveyed in the monotheism parade tomorrow, including rejecting the rise of the PKI and demanding the return of Rieziq Shihab.

We may be fooled by the reasons they say through various media in the country, such as rejecting the rise of the PKI and demanding the return of their High Priest. However, there are some critical notes on their movements. Perhaps this note can make us aware that what the radical group did actually endanger the Republic of Indonesia. Therefore, their movements need not be followed.

First, want to create a positive image. Of course radical groups are not associations of fools, although in the context of religion they often politicize and understand texts partially, wanting to plagiarize themselves as groups that do not endanger the Republic of Indonesia. So, the demonstration was wrapped in a neat package, like the Tawhid parade. Who is against Tauhid in this country? And it is almost certain that the word “monotheism”, independently, has no negative stamp. With the action titled “Tawheed Parade”, it is hoped that they will get a positive image in the community and ultimately get sympathy from the community.

If outwardly, perhaps the action of the Tawheed Parade is very positive. But if in the action of the Monotheism Parade who later shouted words that are not polite and are more directed to disbelieve and bad-mouthing others, as well as constitutionally legitimate leaders? Is a positive image worth imposing on them?

Second, turn direction. The selection of the parade route from Senayan to Monas is worth observing, if you don't want to be said, it should be suspected. Radical groups are not really 'eager' to explore the domain of the legislative in depth. Their focus, especially now, is the executive sphere. This can be seen from the previous actions and the narratives they have made so far. Almost all actions were directed at the rejection of the president. Look at the May 21-23 action, their demands led to the rejection of the President-elect in the April 17, 2019 election. Then the narratives of the leader of the dzalim and the like are also still busy today.

So, it should be strongly suspected that the selection of the parade route from Senayan to Monas, would lead to the next period of action to the palace, with a big agenda to reduce President Jokowi. This is what is called a radical group movement that is always structured, systematic and smart to take advantage of momentum and turn directions.

Third, have another agenda. In the midst of the incessant people who reject the weakening of the KPK Law, uh there is a group that makes a different agenda. And unfortunately, the monotheism flag was used as a 'tool' to wrap their agenda. From here alone it is clear that they have other agendas that are not in line with the general agenda of the Indonesian people. Did the other agenda establish the khilafah? I have no idea.

Beware

The community must be literate and realize that radical groups will always ride demonstrations and always provoke. There have been many cases of radical groups riding demonstrations. The latest occurred in Medan. North Sumatra

Police Chief Inspector General Agus Andrianto said that the student demonstration on September 24, which ended in riots because of being driven by radicals. Beware !!!

What was confirmed by the Coordinating Minister for Politics and Security, Wiranto, that there would be a new wave of demonstrations and that it would be chaotic in the run-up to the inauguration of the President and Vice President, should be observed and addressed wisely. That radical groups will really utilize the emotional momentum of some people to be directed at creating a wave of distrust of the legitimate government.

Therefore, the people should not be provoked and not affected and will not take part in the demonstration because it will disturb the calm and peace of the Republic of Indonesia.
